PREFACE

The State of Arkansas contains thousands of lakes varying in size from less than one acre to several thousands of acres. Most of these impoundments are farm ponds, used primarily for agricultural purposes such as irrigation, fish farming, or for livestock. These small reservoirs are very important to the economy of Arkansas, but, due to their size, it is often difficult to give an accounting for such impoundments. The U.S.D.A. - SCS has constructed 134 dams in Arkansas, including 14 multiple-purpose dams that include additional storage for municipal and industrial water supply, recreation, and fish and wildlife. Sixteen (16) dams have been constructed by the U.S. Corps of Engineers in this State, all of which are multiple-purpose structures. The Corps reservoirs, the largest reservoirs in the State, have been constructed on some of our major rivers.

The development of conservation storage reservoirs for water supply, recreation, and flood control is encouraged by the Arkansas Soil and Water Conservation Commission. The State can take pride in the accomplishments of this conservation investment and in the planning which is insuring the proper use of a precious and limited commodity, water. The Commission has also assisted in the construction of a number of water resource development projects, which include municipal and industrial water supply and recreational reservoirs, through the administration of the Water Development Fund. This fund provides low interest loans and grants to areas which could not otherwise afford to develop a vital water resource project. To this continuing resource development program and to the protection of the water rights of the individual citizen, the Arkansas Soil and Water Conservation Commission is dedicated.

The Commission acknowledges with appreciation the assistance and cooperation of the agencies and individuals who contributed the pertinent data on reservoirs tabulated in this report. Our particular thanks goes to the District Conservationists of the U.S.D.A. - Soil Conservation Service, who furnished most of the information on the small impoundments. Other substantial contributors of information and photographs were the U. S. Corps of Engineers, Arkansas Game and Fish Commission, and the Cooperative Extension Service.

It has often been said that "Arkansas has an abundance of water", which is a true statement with certain qualifications. The majority of the large multiple-purpose reservoirs lie within the Interior Highlands portion of the State. Therefore, the obvious problem exists that the surface water impoundments can be used for a number of purposes, are not evenly distributed over the entire State. There are some areas in Arkansas that are in desperate need of a good quality water supply. It should be noted that these water problems are a serious matter and will be magnified in the future due to the increased demand for water. As is evident by the number of surface water impoundments, a great deal of planning and effort has been expended in years past in order to conserve and properly manage our water resources. But, it must be recognized that the continuation of proper management and extensive and coordinated planning of this natural resource in the future is a necessity we cannot overlook.

INTRODUCTION

Information regarding the availability and location of surface water has become of increasing interest and of critical importance as the comprehensive planning of our State's water resources is accelerated. This report, an update of a 1968 publication by the same name, was compiled in an effort to afford the most recent information available.

All lakes of five acres or more in surface area, are listed by counties. The name and ownership, location, use, surface area, and capacity is given for each of these lakes. A total of 2,470 lakes, excluding the Corps of Engineer Reservoirs, in 72 of the 75 counties of the State are shown. The estimated number of lakes smaller than five acres and their total surface area was estimated from information supplied by the county offices of the U.S.D.A. - Soil Conservation Service.

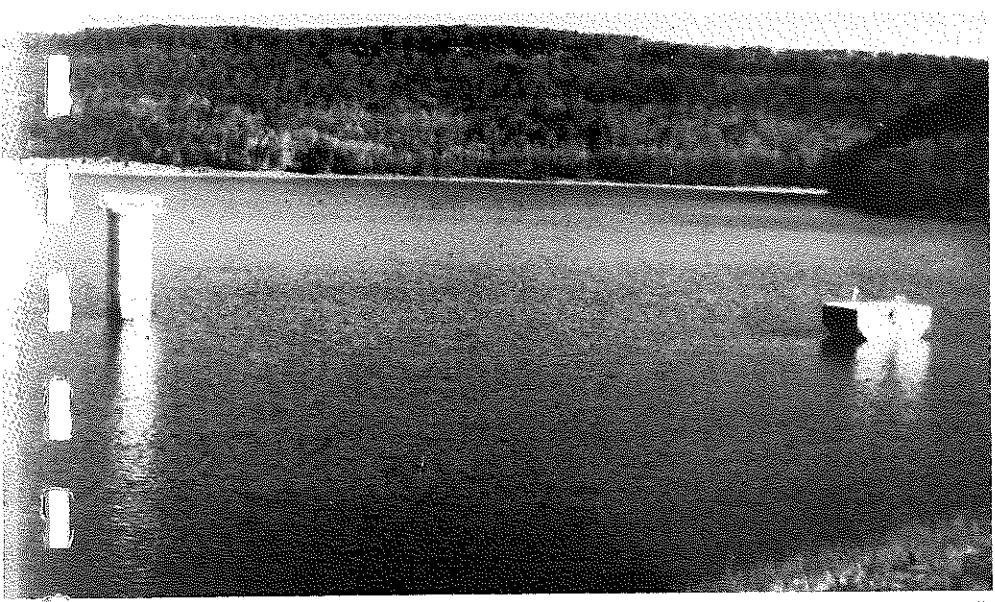

The U. S. Army Corps of Engineers' reservoirs are listed separately. Three of these are located in both Arkansas and Missouri. The surface area in Arkansas of these are: Bull Shoals - 33,760 acres; Table Rock - 2,100 acres; and Norfolk - 19,800 acres.

A summary table was prepared to show the area and capacity of surface water impoundments by counties and in the State. Also included in this report are a number of maps, prepared by the Division staff, which may be useful in water resource planning.

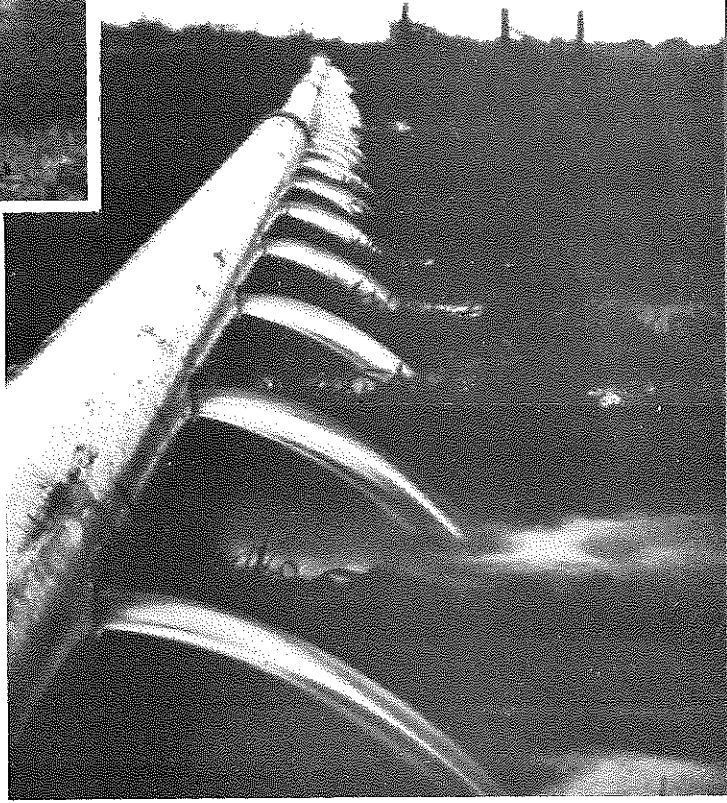

In addition to the information presented in this report, a file of all dams in the state, within certain size limitations, are contained within the AWRMIS data system at the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville. The AWRMIS Dam File was provided by the Little Rock District, Corps of Engineers. The data was collected in preparing the inventory of dams in the United States under the requirement of the National Program for the Inspection of Dams, P.L. 92-367. This information is available to any interested persons and can be obtained by contacting the Division of Soil and Water Resources.

Every reasonable effort has been made to prevent the occurrence of errors in this report. It is recognized, however, that the possibility of omission or error in statistical reporting and recording is great. Information on the discovery of any error or omission would be appreciated by the Commission.
